VIEWING NATURE'S BEAUTY THROUGH A NEW LENS

① Filmmaker Louise Schwartzberg has shot everything/ from TV commercials to documentaries, / but he is best known for his time-lapse photography, / a technique that captures images on film very slowly. ②When shown at regular speed, / the viewer can see things the human eye cannot normally see. / ③Schwartzberg's remarkable documentary —Mysteries of the Unseen World—illustrates his talent / for capturing the wonders of nature / using this technique.

How did you become interested in nature photography and filmmaking?

④I found my voice with photography / as a student at UCLA. ⑤We had anti-war protests going on right outside my classroom, / so I picked up a camera and started to document that.
⑥And when I met my greatest teacher, / then I fell in love with nature. ⑦He taught me everything about lighting, composition, color, and how to live a sustainable, creative life.

Can you explain a little more about your Moving Art platform and what the mission is?

⑧Basically, /I've got a thousand hours of material /that I've filmed over the years. ⑨The mission is to be able to share / how cool nature is—there's amazing timelapse, slow motion, and aerals.
⑩You may have heard of nature deficit disorder, / where kids are suffering from the fact /that They're not connected to nature, / but I think / what we need to do is engage them where they are. ⑪That's what I'm trying to do.
